The figure consists of several panels. The top panel is a schematic diagram of a DNA molecule, showing various regions labeled with letters (A, T, C, G) and numbers. Below this are several panels of data. The first panel is a large table with multiple columns and rows, containing numerical values. The subsequent panels are smaller plots or graphs, each showing a different set of data. The plots include axes and data points, with some showing trends across different conditions. The figure is highly detailed and contains a significant amount of numerical data.
